BBC South visited Ashley Junior School this week to film our new solar panel system. It was a lovely sunny day and the drone footage clearly showed the extensive array of 200 solar panels which will enable the school to generate its own energy. The children and teachers look forward to using this unique resource to inspire and inform their cross curricular projects about clean energy and looking after the environment. Thank you to all the children who participated with such enthusiasm. It was very exciting to watch the TV clip on the BBC South news later that day!
